In an elegant evening of creative prowess and professional networking, the country's most distinguished architects and designers gathered for a SoFi night in Delhi recently. This was M-Connect's second event, in addition to many more online events adding to the community, making it a conglomerate of the architects and designers of India. The event, which has become a cornerstone of the industry's social calendar, brought together over 50 leading designers, architects, and industry innovators. The carefully curated guest list included the who's who of architectural and design fraternity, featuring award-winning architects and designers, known for their work across fields — from historic preservation projects to ultra-modern urban developments.

Speaking about the event, Ashish Bhasin, Founder, Marmo Solutions, said, "When you bring together this level of talent and creativity, meaningful collaborations are inevitable. We're already seeing partnership forms that will shape the future of our industry."

The event's success was evident in the steady buzz of conversation that filled the air at the venue. "This isn't just a social gathering. These connections lead to real collaborations that push our industry forward," Bhasin added. What was witnessed at the event was more than networking — it was the formation of design coalitions that will influence how we live and work for years to come, Bhasin opines. "The connections made here will translate into innovative projects that redefine design and architecture across the country."

As the design community looks ahead, the success of this gathering serves as a testament to the industry's resilience and continued evolution.
